DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Baltimore County Courthouse has evolved over the years into one of the few H-plan buildings, public or private, in the State; nor are such buildings common across the nation. Despite several remodelings and additions, the Greek-Revival influence on the east facade remains strong. The small-town concept of the original village has gradually been overwhelmed by the inevitable expansion of Baltimore County which is ever increasing.

The green, tree-shaded lawn adds to the cityscape of the Courthouse square in contrast to the multi-story, late 1960's office buildings around the perimeter of the lawn.

Finished in the year 1855, the original sandstone and marble Baltimore County Courthouse in Towson, Maryland was an impressive rectangular block, two stories in height and nine bays in length. The east facade was embellished with a two-story Greek Revival porte-cochere with a pediment supported by fluted Doric columns. The large windows of both the first and second floor levels were enhanced by a narrow, coved stone lintel with a decorative croisette. At a later date, the shallow "A" frame roof of the main block was crowned with a centered, eight-windowed, pilastered, frame cupola bearing a domed copper roof. All of these original exterior treatments are preserved intact (1971).

In 1910, two-story additions were built at the north and south ends respectively, slightly recessed back from the facade (east) wall of the original structure, a successful carry-over of the classical character of the building. It was also at this time that a rear (west) one-story wing was added to the west, giving the structure an overall T-plan.

Later remodeling was completed in 1925, including raising the west wing to two full stories and extending it almost twice its original length. In 1958, the final stage of the present form was completed. This involved the erection of a massive three-story rectangular block at the once exposed end of the 1910-1925 west addition, and at this time the building evolved into its present H-plan.

Baldwin and Pennington are as significant to Maryland architecture as Thomas Dixon, if not more so. They designed a variety of structures from buildings at Catholic University in Washington, to the prestigious Maryland Club in Baltimore, and to railroad stations of all sizes for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Although they can hardly be called pioneers of modern architecture, Baldwin and Pennington made a large and important contribution to the late nineteenth century architectural heritage of Maryland.

In the words of architectural historian, J. Richard Rivoire, "Further twentieth-century additions to the Baltimore County Courthouse, although architecturally undistinguished, do not interfere with the Dixon or

CONTINUE ON SEPARATE SHEET IF NECESSARY

Baldwin and Pennington facades or with the green lawn in front."

The courthouse is pleasantly situated within a park-like courthouse green that is enjoyed frequently by visitors and townspeople alike.

Court Room No. 5 was the county's first court room where the first session was held, January 5, 1857, and this second-story room retains its 19th Century atmosphere almost unchanged, except for the installation of electricity and period replacements to replace deteriorated items. The dark woods, related accessories, and hard, straight spectator benches contribute to the total "presence" of this typical American court room of the mid-to-late 1800's. The numerous portraits form a gallery of judicial history.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

In 1854, the Commissioners of Baltimore County hired the architectural firm of Dixon, Balbirnie & Dixon to design a courthouse in Towson, the new county seat. (In 1851, the Maryland legislature had separated Baltimore City from the county creating two independent political units.) The cornerstone was laid on October 19, 1854; William H. Allen was building contractor.

Thomas Balbirnie left the firm a few months later. The remaining partners, Thomas Dixon and his brother James M. Dixon, continued to supervise the completion of the structure.

Thomas Dixon was a prominent architect in the Baltimore area from the 1850's until his death in 1856. His contemporaries included George A. Frederick, architect of the Baltimore City Hall and E. G. Lind, who designed the Peabody Institute. Dixon, with the assistance of his brother, drew the plans for the Baltimore City Jail (1859). Thomas Dixon's works vary from a set of proposals for Baltimore County schools, to row-houses on Lutaw Place in Bolton Hill (1853), to the Mount Vernon Place United Methodist Church (1871).

Dixon's Greek-Revival courthouse is reminiscent of Hampton House, Hampton National Historic Monument, the home of the Ridgely family about three miles to the north. The courthouse cupola is almost a direct copy of the one at Hampton. However, Dixon's cupola is much more severe in detailing in keeping with the severe style of the entire structure.

Hampton would have been a logical model for a Baltimore County Courthouse. Architecturally, no other building in the county can equal it. The Ridgely's held a prominent place in Maryland history. The 1850's owner, John Ridgely, had donated a forty-acre farm to the county.

However, the present cupola is actually the stump of a three-part, Williamsburg-like spire shown on a rare county map of c. 1855. As reported in the Baltimore County Advocate of August 8, 1863, the Commissioners had given orders "to take down the two upper sections of the courthouse steeple ..." and to "cover remaining section with tin ..." and to build a cornice.

CONTINUE ON SEPARATE SHEET IF NECESSARY

A mysterious fire started in the clerk's office on August 24, 1861, and numerous civil dockets and papers were burned, giving rise to the suspicion that some person wished to destroy the evidence in a civil proceeding. On May 7, 1867, three men in disguise overpowered the watchman, blew open the safe in the treasurer's office, and made off with $13,000 in cash and securities, some of it private funds left, as was the custom, for safe-keeping by the treasurer. (Scharf, 1881, pp. 899ff)

Dixon & Dixon's courthouse served the county until the twentieth century, when the expanding county government required more space. In 1910, the Baltimore architects, E. F. Baldwin and Josias Pennington, enlarged the courthouse - almost doubling the floor space. Seven years earlier, the firm had enlarged the size of the Maryland State House in a Colonial-Revival style which compliments the original 1777 section. Baldwin and Pennington showed the same respect for old buildings in their addition to the Baltimore County Courthouse. They used the same type of stone, the same scale, identical window size and treatment.

Baldwin and Pennington extended the east facade to the north and to the south. In order to prevent one vast expanse of stone wall that would diminish the impact of the central portico, they tried to break up the east facade. At the beginning of each addition at the north and south ends of the original building, Baldwin and Pennington placed a pediment, supported by two-story pilasters, echoing the temple form of the entrance. The resulting east wall, although almost a city block long, does not overpower the central section.

The Baltimore County Union reported on May 13, 1911, that Virginia M. Burke, daughter of Judge Burke, for whom Burke Avenue is named, was to pull the rope to open the new part of the courthouse to the public. On April 28, 1912, Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, to be nominated later that year for President, spoke in the court room at Towson.

As noted under Item 7, the building was filled out to an H-plan by the additions of 1956-1958. In 1976, the land and equity records, and most court activity was moved into the large new County Courts Building located across a plaza to the west. The plaza occupies the former bed of Baltimore Avenue, one of the thoroughfares included in the donation of the original four-acre site to the public by Dr. Grafton M. Bosely in 1854.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION

EXTERIOR

Overall demensions Original Building 1855- 15,000 sq. feet- additions in 1905and 1910-1925and 1958 making total of 124,500 sq. feet. Old Court House renovated and modernized in 1963-64

Foundations
Stone

Wall construction Stone- original Building-2'6" masonry (limestone). Additions matching stone-1'6"

Porches, stoons, bulkheads, etc. Portico dominates East Facade- Six Classic Doric Columns 4' in diameter at base support the architrave and frieze above- Frieze is divided into panels engraved with 3 verticle groves-one over each column and one between in true classic style. The stone floor is of slate and marble squares laid in diagonal pattern. ~~Chimneys~~ The stone was quarried locally at Limekiln and Beaver Dam, ~~Stoops~~ at side entrances flanked by smaller columns-stone steps-etc.

Chimneys- Stone, 5 in all

Openings - doorways and doors Main entrance facing east and two side entrances-all with vestibules-outer and inner doors-originally panelled wood-now glass and metal. Old doors replaced with solid wood thru out except original court room- unchanged.

6 windows and shutters in original building First floor window panes 6, second floor 9 wood frames-replaced with metal when renovated. Stone trim around windows and two stone brackets beneath each sill.

Roof - shape, covering Hip - Roof - Slate

cornice, eaves Stone

dormers, cupolas Wood cupola - metal covered - painted - small windows

INTERIOR

Floor plans (by floor)
Photostats Attached

Stairways Original Building - Cast iron- replaced by metal stair rail and terrazzo steps

Flooring Original Building - Main corridors marble, rectangles form a pattern.
In additions - Terrazzo Floors.

Wall and ceiling finish Main corridors marble veneer thru out - in old building plaster over stone, in new building over concrete.

Doorways and doors In original Building - recessed and wood panelled doors, plain wood thru out.

Trim No

Hardware Originally cast iron and brass - now modern

Lighting Formerly lamps and gas - 4 original chandeliers, each with 12 round milk glass globes on bronze fixture made for gas, converted to electric in old court room-all other lighting fluorescent, recessed.

Heating (fireplaces, stoves, central, etc.) Originally fire places, perhaps stoves- presently, central heating (oil) and air conditioning thru out.

SITE

Orientation (by compass reading and general setting) Court House Building faces East. Right of way in 1856 extended to York Road- now property borders on Washington Ave. to north on Pennsylvania Ave., to south on Chesapeake Ave. to west on Baltimore Ave.

Enclosures (fences, etc.) Wrought iron spiked fence encloses grounds; granite posts to support gates on four sides, originally. As building has grown, surrounding ground space has diminished and balance and proportion in original design has been lost.

Outbuildings Not any

Walks, driveways, etc. Concrete walks about the building- on three sides and leading to street. No driveways.

Landscaping, gardens, etc. Old trees - Linden, line main walkway to front entrance.

Maple, pine and oak, shrubbery includes magnolia, Japanese cherry, azalea, ground cover

Prepared by E. Frances Offutt (& Ruth Somerville) of Ivy, etc.

Name of Structure Baltimore County Court House

Address Washington Avenue, Towson, Baltimore County, Maryland
State, county, township, locality, street address or location

Present Owner (give address) Baltimore County

Present Occupant County Government

Present Use County Government

Brief Statement of Significance (historical): Towson town became the County seat of Baltimore County by popular vote in 1853. A number of prominent citizens proposed giving land for the building of a court house. The Court House property was subsequently conveyed by deed on Sept. 26, 1854 from Dr. Grafton W. Bosley to the Commissioners of Baltimore County. It was recorded on Sept. 29, 1854 in Liber H.M.F.

Original and subsequent owners #9 folio 62. It provided for a parcel of ground containing four acres and a right of way to York Road. The first session of the Court was held on Jan. 5, 1857.

Date of Erection 1855

Architect Dixon and Baldwin

Builder, suppliers, etc. William H. Allen - builder
John F. Connolly - stonecutter

Original plans, construction, etc. Not available - However, the original courthouse was built to accommodate one main court (Circuit) and Orphans Court - Register of Wills - Record Office and served 45,000 population.

Notes on alterations and additions (see attached photostats)
The present Court House contains 7 Court rooms, a People's Court, Housing Court, Assessment Office and numerous other offices. The County Office Building on Chesapeake Avenue provides space for still more departments. A Council Chamber, Court of Appeals, etc. and more space is needed as the county population soars to over half a million (1966)

HISTORICAL EVENTS CONNECTED WITH STRUCTURE Following the separation of Baltimore County and Baltimore City in 1851, it became necessary to select a seat of government and construct a court house. Prior to 1854 when the cornerstone of the Court House was laid, the one previous to that had been in Baltimore (1768 on Jones Falls-~~see~~ photostat); still earlier there was a Court House at Joppatown in 1725-(see Photostat). The very first county seat was on the Bush River and most probably there was a Court House there. There have been no special historical events connected with the Court House, but it has been in continuous use since 1857- and many prominent judges have presided there. Their portraits line the walls of the old Court Room in the original building.

A legal library of valuable books and documents collected over the past century is available to lawyers and interested persons, on the second floor of the old Court House.

In case the Voters of Baltimore County shall designate TOWSON TOWN as their County Seat of Justice, the undersigned, agree to give for the erection of a Court House and Jail for said county, a lot of ground not less than five acres, as numbered on the above Plat, from No. 1 to No. 5, inclusive—that is to say, Henry B. Chew, will give the choice of the five acres, in Lots No. 1, 2, or 3; Benj. N. Payne, will give the five acres in Lot No. 4, and Grafton M. Bosley, will give the five acres in Lot No. 5.

And we agree to leave it to the Commissioners of Baltimore County, or to any other proper authority, to determine which of the said Lots of five acres each, they will select for said purpose, and, which ever Lot may be selected, a good and sufficient Deed will be given for the same, for the use of said County.

WITNESS our hands this 14th day of December, 1853.

HENRY B. CHEW,
BENJ. N. PAYNE,
GRAFTON M. BOSLEY.

In case the Voters of Baltimore County shall designate Towson Town as their County seat of Justice, the undersigned, agree to give for the Alms House for said County, forty acres of good land, within 2 miles of said Towson Town, and to execute a good and sufficient Deed for the same.

WITNESS, my hand, this 14th day of December, 1853.

J. RIDGELY, of H.

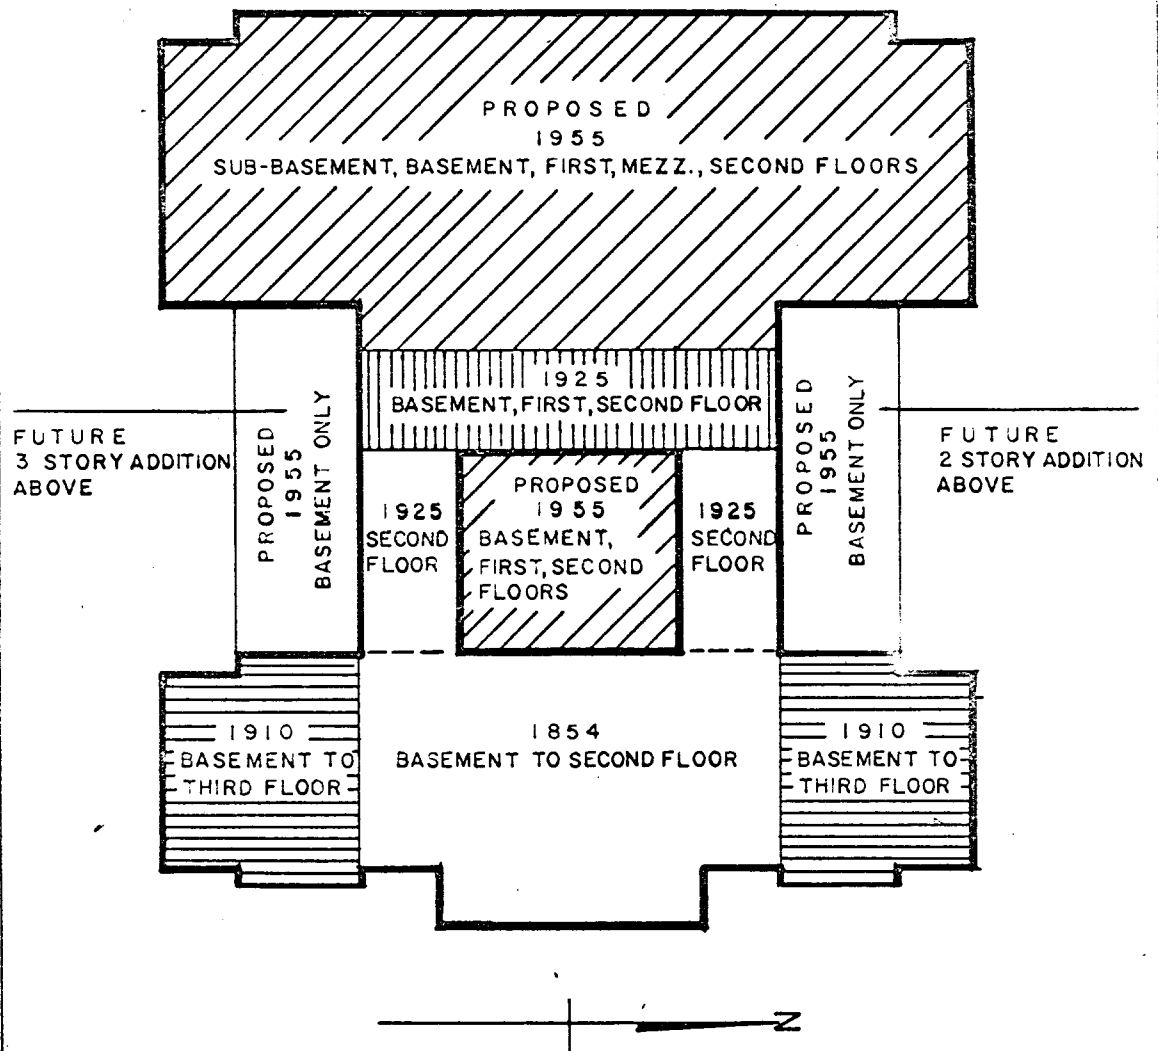

Above is a Plat of Towson Town, with the offer made by certain persons, to give Forty Five Acres of land to the County, to erect a Court House, Jail, Almshouse, and other appropriate buildings for the use of the County, all of which would then be convenient to each other. The central situation of this place—its accessibility from all parts of the County, by Turnpike and other roads, already opened, with a Rail Road about two miles from the spot; its high and healthy position, with pure water, and an abundance of building materials, evidently point to this place as the proper one, for locating a "County Town" for Baltimore County, and where it will not be put to the expense of making new roads, or moving its BUILDINGS AT A FUTURE PERIOD.

Taken from the top of one of the Washington Avenue bank buildings in Towson, this photo shows Dixon and Dixon's 1854 courthouse, the 1910 Baldwin and Pennington north and south wings added onto the original facade, and the 1926 and 1958 additions (making an H shape). Toward the top of the picture looms Gaudreau's massive County Courts Building of the 1970s.

The expanding business community at Hunt Valley was photographed on July 21, 1983. Near the top of the picture, to the right of Interstate 83 are the low buildings of Marriott's Hunt Valley Inn. To their right are the Executive Plaza office towers, and to their right, off by itself, is the world headquarters of the PHH Group. Across Shawan Road from PHH is the low-lying Hunt Valley Mall. On the hill above the mall, and to the left of it, is the Masonic Home of Maryland, originally known as Bonnie Blink, once the Weiskittel estate. It is now a retirement home for Maryland's Freemasons and their families. Across Shawan Road from the mall and to the right of the picture is a C & P Telephone Company office building. The bridge crossing Interstate 83, mid-point in the photo, is Beaver Dam Road.

Baltimore County provides a welcoming and cooperative environment for business and industry. An active and effective, forward-looking Baltimore County Chamber of Commerce supports and advises businesses and corporations of all sizes, from the internationally renowned to the fledgling one-or two-person enterprise.
